It all starts out so well. You've picked an awesome place for dinner, the meal is great, the conversation is easy, you've found out you have tons of things in common (you both like exercise! and music!), and you both want to keep the night going. SUCCESS.

But then you stop, a cold chill runs down your spine, and you realize you have no idea where the f*ck to take this person next. You were so caught up in picking out a dinner place you didn't even think about where to drink afterwards.

Don't let this be you. The one-two punch, dinner-then-drinks date is your proven road to date night glory, whether it's your third date or thirtieth. And we've plotted all the best ones out for you. We can't promise these plans will convince someone to go home with you, but we can promise they'll be a rock solid foundation on which to seal the deal.

As for the getting laid part? That's on you. But if you want to continue to move things in the right direction, head to Eli's Night Shift. It feels much more like a place you would find much farther downtown. And in this case, that's a good thing.
