In normal times, many people enjoy communal Passover Seder dinners in restaurants, and there are usually many worth recommending. Similarly, Easter Sunday is often a time for festive brunches and dinners, frequently in restaurants. But this year is different, with dining rooms shuttered and diners staying in. Still, there will be festivities, and eating. Here are a number of places ready to help with meals and foods for the holidays for pickup and delivery:

Eli's Market

Recognizing that Passover celebrations will be smaller this year, Eli Zabar is assembling packages for pickup or delivery to serve two or four (or more — they can be expanded in multiples of two). They feature traditional menus, including gefilte fish with horseradish, matzo ball soup, brisket, haroseth and Jewish-style macarons, for $124. A $165 package includes a Seder plate and a box of Eli's homemade matzo. Other items are also available, and delivery to the Hamptons can be arranged.

1411 Third Avenue (80th Street), 212-860-0402, ext. 9, 212-423-0129, elizabar.com.

Eli's Market

An à la carte menu of Easter specialties will be sold for pickup or delivery. See details above.
